Anti Corruption International and Compliance Channel join Forces in the Area of Corruption Prevention and Compliance

Anti Corruption International (ACI) and the Compliance Channel have entered into a co-operation agreement in the fields of Anti-Corruption and Compliance to join forces to increase public perception and awareness in these areas. The unique co-operation between the innovative Web-TV platform Compliance Channel and the NGO ACI being managed by young people focused on the eradication of corruption, strives for all people – young and old alike – to be able to join the fight against corruption and to catch up on various Ethics & Compliance topics. The co-operation will mutually support the respective activities and increase public awareness as well as launching joint projects in the future.

Jason Deegan, President of ACI stated; “Having observed the work of the Compliance Channel over the last number of months, I believe that this co-operation affords us the opportunity to really affect tangible change in the way people approach not only corruption but in meeting our obligations to ensure adequate compliance measures are put in place and adhered to. This co-operation presents a unique opportunity for us to develop our capacity as well as offer ways to ensure high quality content on compliance are reaching a wide and varied audience.

Dr. Kathrin J. Niewiarra, Founder and CEO of the Compliance Channel added; “I am very excited to have a chance to work together with ACI and its inspiring members all over the world. In particular, I look forward to sharing experiences with young people in an international setting and being able to support such a great movement. The co-operation with ACI will offer new and innovative channels to generate more premium content for our users.”
